"FALSE AND IMPERTINENT."

"There are evidences of apathy in the Republican campaign in Delaware."

The above from Every Evening of Wednesday last is a sample of the "truthful" statements for which the editor of that organ stands responsible. It may be necessary, in order to run a Democratic paper to make such assertions. Had this appeared prior to the Primary Election of last Saturday, it might have been urged in excuse that the editor did not know better. But with every paper, including his own, full of the exciting nomination at which more than 6,000 votes were polled, there is nothing to believe that the mis-statement is wilful and malicious.

It is time that the Chairman of the Republican State Committee is not issuing addresses or pronunciamentos. But the work necessary at this stage of a campaign is being done and when the result of the election is announced on November 7th, the editor above referred to will be wishing that the apathy under which Democracy had labored had been of the same brand as the Republicans had enjoyed.

ANSWER

THE TRANSCRIPT evidently got under the skin of the assistant editor of Every Evening who under the guise of "Commenting" on political events is trying to shake the red rag of "negro domination." He says in reference to our account of an actual statement by an agent of the Anti-Bribery League that he was not after the Democratic worker but was after the Republican worker in the same district, "Was this worker the agent of the Anti-Bribery League or of the Democratic Party? Did the editor of THE TRANSCRIPT, like a good citizen, report the case to the officers of the League or to the Democratic officials—or did he use it gloatingly to discredit any reform movement? Who was this incompetent and venal detective anyway? Who is the Democrat he advised? Where was it? Did the Democratic worker act on his advice? The League wants accurate information, etc."

As to the first question, we only have the statement of the man himself that he was "after a Republican." While the Anti-Bribery League and the Democratic Party occupy the same headquarters and the agent in charge is an official of both organizations we are not able to say which one he is acting for in naming his spies. For instance, one of the agents here in Middletown on the 15th of September last, the only date of which any such agents have been here, was, and is, employed by the Democratic Congressional candidate as stenographer. We cannot tell whether he was an agent of the League or of the Democratic Party. Can Commentator?

THE TRANSCRIPT did not report the case to the League nor to the Democratic officials—for the reason that he apparently did his full duty. He watched the Republican and shut his eyes when the Democrat was about. Had our informant specified any illegal act done by the agent, we would certainly have reported it to the Attorney-General. But it is not illegal to walk around in a peaceable manner, even though some people do not place a high estimate on the work of a spy. We did not use the story gloatingly but told it as it came to us and after being satisfied as to its being true.

As to the name of the place where the incident happened, we must decline to give any information without the consent of our authority. We are satisfied and assumed the responsibility for the story.

THE TRANSCRIPT said, that the district where the incident occurred was one of the few districts that showed a fairly large registration. This is evidence of the fact that the Democratic worker did act on the advice given.

This we think covers all the questions asked. In time we want to ask "Commentator" who appears among other duties to assume the responsibility for the ...s and intentions of the League and its agents, when he says that the League wants accurate information, a few questions.

Who is Commentator?

Is it not a fact that every agent employed by the League is a Democrat and either now in the employ of the Democratic Party or some of its candidates or is an active member of that organization working merely for his expenses?

Is it not a fact that every such agent has instructions, expressed or implied, to watch Republicans closely?

Is it not a fact that every such agent when sent to a District is furnished with the names of the Republican Committeemen but not with those of the Democratic Committeemen?

THE THREATENED THIRD TICKET

The disaffected late Union Republicans of this county announce their intention of placing a ticket on the ballot for the purpose of defeating the Republicans. A great deal of space is given by Democratic papers to the actions of the so-called "conventions" at least two of which have been held and another promised for next Tuesday. At one of these "conventions" attended by an estimated fifty persons, speeches were made, the nominee for one of the county offices stating that he expected to poll more votes at the election than both of the candidates for the same office received at the Primary Election of last Saturday or more than 6,000 votes. As the Republican ticket elected ...wo years ago received slightly over 13,000 votes, and as 1904 was a presidential year and the vote was in excess of any previously polled and much larger than any one anticipates will be polled this year, such statements can only be classed as "hot air." If the ticket really appears on the ballot and the nominees receive 100 votes, it will be a surprise as great to them as the rest of the community. This section of the county has been honored by being accorded to the candidate for Sheriff. This was probably done to bring votes to the ticket and it will possibly secure the vote of the nominee. His strength with the Republicans of St. Georges and Pencader Hundreds was shown in the Primary Election of 1904, when the sheriffalty candidate was on the ballot as a candidate for Levy Court Commissioner.

The real reason for such threats is plain. Two years ago some of the same persons were the cause of a Primary Election being held and a full county ticket nominated. Prior to the elections, for cash considerations ranging from $1,000 to $3,500, the candidates resigned and the Republican nominees were substituted. Now, the proposition is to have the Democratic candidates stand for the "graft" in order to keep the ticket on the ballot. It may be that the Democrats are still buying gold bricks. It would not be the first time. But the publicity given to this matter should be a warning and if they do get parted from their cash, it will be their own fault. Republicans are not in the business this year.

LETTER TO W. D. KING
Middletown, Del.

Dear Sir: We shall feel obliged if you write us how you came out on your first few jobs Devoe, as to gallons expected and used.

Take Job A. You made your price, expecting to use 24 gallons Devoe, and used 15. Job B. You expected to use 15 and used 10. And tell us what paint you had used before. Of course, you judge Devoe by what you have used before.

Here's how a few came out.

M A Thomas, painter, Lynchburg, Va, writes: My first job with Devoe, I estimated 37 gallons; it took 25. Since then I have used nothing else.

C B Edwards Raleigh, N C, had used 30 gallons paste paint on his house, and 30 gallons Devoe; A E Glenn, his painter, said it wouldn't be enough. Had 16 gallons left.

Mayor W W Carroll, Monticello, Florida, writes Painted estimated 35 gallons for my house; took 20 gallons Devoe.

Gilmore & Davis Co, contractors and painters, Tallahassee, Florida, say 2 gallons Devoe spreads as 3 of any other paint they know, and covers better.

S A Bullard, painter, Sanford, Florida, estimated 50 gallons for Odd Fellows and Masonic Halls; they took 29 Devoe.

Jones & Rogers Merkel, Texas estimated 10 gallons Devoe for Mr Pratt's house and bought 5 gallons for first coat; it painted two coats.

Erb-Springgall Co, San Antonio, Texas painted two houses same size for D J Woodward, one lead-and-oil, the other Devoe cost $12 less for paint and labor.

Tom Masey's painter, Walnut Springs Texas, estimated for his house 10 gallons Devoe; he had 4 left.

You see how it goes. Even the best painters can't guess little enough at first.

Yours truly

F W DEVOE & Co

FALL SALE OF HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS!

Stirring economics on good houseware That word "good" must be spelt in capital letters. It is the keystone of this sale of housefurnishing—there's not one of the thousand and one articles that is not thoroughly good for this purpose for which it is intended.

There is not one item of trash in this whole basement of kitchen things. The enamel ware is absolutely perfect, not a second in the lot; the tinware is the best made; the nickel plated goods are the best that money can buy; the wooden is all made of clear wood; we will not accept any with knots in it; and while there are various grades of many articles, every one of them is worthy, and every article is worth much more than its October price.

By-the-way, an especially good bargain included in this sale are the Trunks. We must have room to display the Christmas goods which are arriving daily, so we have decided to clean up our trunk stock. To do this we have reduced them to more than one third of the original prices. This is an opportunity you should not miss. It is not often that you can get such a good trunk and save money at the same time. Try it.

Eight horses were started in this race, and several of them were fast ones, but Mr. Cochran has the reputation of breeding good ones, and "Prince March," has proven to be one of the best in the State. The new meat inspection labels are unique. They consist of a thin piece of gelatine or like substance about one and a quarter inches square. On the label is printed in blue letters something like this: U. S. inspected and passed 207. The inspector simply slaps the little tag on the piece of meat and the moisture makes it stick. In a short time the gelatine dissolves and the blue letters remain on the meat. It can't be removed except by cutting it off and it is perfectly harmless.

FARM LIFE MORE ATTRACTIVE

"There is general complaint among farmers over the scarcity of farm help. Some farmers are seriously considering abandoning farming because of this trouble. It has gotten to a point where it is a serious problem to solve. Men who worked on the farm several years ago can now be found in our mills and factories, where they claim they have regular hours. The farmer must consider what he must do to retain or attract laborers. He must awake to the fact that he must offer attractions in shorter hours and if possible, better accommodations. The time has undoubtedly passed when the hours on the farm were from sun to sun. While there is no better or healthier life than on the farm, it is hard to teach this lesson to individuals who can find ready employment in mills and factories, where the hours are from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M., with part holiday on Saturdays. We believe that if farm life is more attractive the farmer will have less trouble in securing sufficient help. This is merely a. suggestion."—Newark (Del.) Ledger.

PREDICT A SEVERE WINTER

It is said by the observing ones that the approaching winter will be unusually severe. The katydid has appeared, say these winter prognosticators and within six weeks after her first song frost is sure to appear. Another sign pointed out to sustain this contention is that bushes this year are plentiful throughout the country and this is said to be nature's way of providing refuge for the birds in time of storm. Then citations are made of the crop of holly berries, the tickness of corn husks and the enormous yield of acorns, chestnuts, beech nuts and other fruit of the forest upon which birds and beasts depend for food during the winter. The unusual activity of the barn mice is still another sign of a long and severe winter. These little animals have already begun the work of constructing their nests and observers agree that they are making them unusually warm and cozy. All the above signs are said to forecast a rough and severe winter.

BLEW SMOKE AT MAD DOG

"John Rittenhouse, of Townsend, Del., who was bitten on the nose by his dog, which was mad several days ago, will come to the Pasteur Institute in Baltimore for treatment. He had been playing with the animal, not knowing it was rabid, and while he was blowing smoke into its eyes it bit him. The dog then created havoc around Townsend, biting a large number of horses, cows and other dogs. A report was sent out from the State laboratory of the Delaware College, Newark, where the head of the animal was sent, stating it was afflicted with the rabies. Winfield S. Lattomus, a farmer, has four horses and two mules that were bitten. They are isolated.—Baltimore Sun.

DOES AWAY WITH RED TAPE

A decided change has been undertaken by the State Board of Education in the manner of some rural schools. It is believed to be the first step, as far as the board can, within its authority, take such step, toward consolidation of schools, that the modern grading system may be resorted to and its principles more thoroughly understood by practical experience. The board adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That Roxana consolidated schools, Nos. 30, 173 and 180, be a graded school of Sussex County. And we further resolve. That the list of districts as now assigned to graded schools be discontinued and the children be allowed to attend anyone of the graded schools now established by the State Board of Education in the county in which such child resides." The board further took action to the effect that children from Sussex County as well as Kent should be allowed to attend Milford High School, and children from New Castle County as well as Kent should attend Smyrna High School, without additional cost to parents. Heretofore the State Board had given county superintendents the authority to admit such pupils at their discretion, but now all such red tape is done away with. When, however, any of these high graded schools are found to be full, those last applying, after the high schools are filled, will not get in.

PROHIBITIONISTS NOMINATE TICKET

New Castle County Prohibitionists held a convention on Saturday afternoon in the Wilmington Board of Trade rooms, and nominated the following ticket: Sheriff, Alexander Deakyne, of Blackbird; Coroner, E. A. Webb, of Wilmington; Register of Wills, Charles E. Wilson, of Wilmington; Recorder of Deeds, Charles F. Roberts, of Odessa; Register in Chancery and Clerk of the Orphans' Court, Joseph Derrickson, Wilmington. The following executive committee of the county committee was appointed: Chairman, Richard W. Brown; Treasurer, George A. Rhoades; Secretary, L. W. Brosius, Rev. Joel S. Gilfillan, of Newark, and Rev. A. W. Lightbourne, of Middletown. Richard W. Brown presided and L. W. Brosius was secretary of the convention. Another meeting will be held this (Saturday) afternoon to nominate legislative candidates.

NEW HARMONY DESIGN

The Republican, Democratic and Prohibition State tickets have been filed with the clerk of the peace in Dover. All three clerks of the peace have the question of the Republican design before them. The design as adopted by the convention after the spirited fight with Addicks who desired his party mark, the star, is an eagle with outstreched wings and imprinted upon its exposed breast, a five pointed star. An artist has been called in and three Philadelphia engravers have been called to make this design, but they have thus far failed to bring out the star as prominently as the Republican party leaders would like to see it. It takes a very large eagle to carry upon its breast, without too great a projection, a five-pointed star. Then too the eagle's breast is black, and so must be the star. The matter of printing the star in red was suggested. A Philadelphia designer, however, on Saturday submitted a design which may prove acceptable. It displays the star well down on the eagle's breast and with diagonal paralled lines so finely drawn as to make necessary contrast with the eagel's rough feathers.

A curious fashion of marking trunks by some individual and odd device has come into practice. It is a trick that helps to identify one's baggage instantly, even at a distance, in a crowded railway station, and thus facilitates travel, especially abroad, where so much red tape entangles baggage transportation.

Some of the devices used are queer, to say the least. A lover of dogs had big brindle's heads in brown and white painted at intervals on all her trunks and suit cases before sailing for Germany. She felt sure, she said, that she would be able to identify her baggage anywhere by these signs.

. . . HELD TO DUTY . . .

BY MARY SWEET POTTER

It was fast growing dark in the dim old kitchen, where Laura Pierce had worked, without rest, since five o'clock in the morning. With a step that was wonderfully light and elastic, considering all those hours of toil, she at length untied her working apron and left the house, going swiftly down the narrow path to the gate between the lilacs, glancing apprehensively backward.

Eyes less used to scan the landscape round about would have failed to locate the distant roadway, where a moving figure was dimly discernible coming briskly toward the house; but Mrs. Pierce knew exactly where to look for it, and the firm but graceful poise of the approaching figure could not be mistaken.

It is she—my little Ruth! I might have known she would not fail me. These four years, which seem like a dozen, are over at last, and within a week I shall be free; then Ruth and I can be together in a home of our own, away from this place, which does not deserve the name of home.

Talking thus to herself she waited a few moments at the gate, then hastened on to meet the one who was swiftly coming nearer.

When they met they clasped hands and kissed tenderly, then looked eagerly into each other's faces, to see if there were changes.

There were changes in both faces, and there was still sufficient light to make them visible.

Oh, Ruth! I can see, even by this dim light, the signs of the hard battle you have been fighting, and all for me.

Not entirely, Mother; I wanted to have you for my own good as well as yours. I wanted a pretty, pleasant home with you in it in peace and plenty, and I have worked and economized till I've got it, and now the only question is, how soon can we go and take possession of it?

The face of the elder woman quivered with emotions that seemed to conflict, joy predominating, however; and she could not speak for a moment, till she had succeeded in controlling herself.

I know, she said at length; I have not burned your last letter yet; I wanted to read it over and over again—the description of the little rooms and the furniture and all about the place you have got ready for your foolish old mother.

No, not foolish, Mother, but worn out and nervous. Cry if you want to; it will do you good. But tell me first how poor old Dick gets along. I have engaged a place for him, too.

Oh, I have been so worried about him! I couldn't bear to see him work; he is too old. He is the only living creature on the place you and I can lay claim to; I am glad he is going.

You forget Dandy. I have always included Dick and Dandy in my calculations. Mother, tell me, did father ever strike you?

No; and that's why I've had so many doubts, Ruth. Maybe so long as he doesn't do that I ought to stay by him, and never mind his tongue, though it is often so cruel, as you well know.

Mother, not a particle of the element of duty enters into the consideration of this matter at all. I have given him four years here alone with you (without a sight of my face, which he hates, because it shows so plainly the scorn I feel for him, I suppose), and your kindness and gentleness and forbearance—with bitter emphasis—to work upon him without restraint or interruption of any kind, still he remains the same selfish, cruel wretch. God forgive me for speaking in such a manner of my father, but I cannot help it when I look at you.

The little, faded woman, with a weak self-pity born of shattered nerves, was sobbing hysterically now, and the daughter drew her down upon a rocky seat and held her slender form closely while she soothed her lovingly.

So, just as soon as we can arrange for a safe and uninterrupted departure, you are going with me to the place I have made ready for you—you and Dick and Dandy—and we will try to take a little comfort together.

Ruth, my little Ruth, how has it been possible for you to accomplish so much?

The young woman turned her face, so full of the durable beauty of health and strong character, smilingly toward her mother.

It was all your doing, little mother, and all very simple, too. You used the money you had saved when you were young to graduate me from that blessed Normal school, and the patience and perseverance, also inherited from you, kept me persistently at work till I gained the position I now hold, which will enable me to do what I have all my life been dreaming of and striving for—liberate you from cruel slavery.

The little, faded mother shuddered and sank her voice to a whisper as she said:

The Lord only knows what he would do if he knew that money had been used. It has been a nightmare to me ever since, fearing that he would find it out.

But it was yours, Mother, and you will soon be out of his reach, so drop that load off your mind, now and forever. Every cent's worth that belongs to him, and much that belongs to you, will be left for him, and that ought to satisfy him

But it will not, Ruth; he will rage like a demon, and I'm afraid he will easily find us.

Never! I have planned this in my mind, over and over, and it shall not, cannot fail.

The tired, childish, broken-down woman buried her face in her hands and again wept hysterically; then she calmed herself.

To-morrow morning he is going, with all the hired men, over to the farther farm, she said, and I have baked all day so that they would have plenty to carry with them to eat, for you know they always stay there two days, and your father cooks vegetables and coffee for them and himself. They sleep on the bunks that have been there so long in the old farmhouse, with quilts and pillows that they take from here. She paused, looking expectantly at her daughter.

You see we are specially favored, Mother, said Ruth, replying to the look, and then she added, bitterly: Let us go in now. I am sure he will be delighted to see his only child!

When mother and daughter entered the kitchen they found it dimly lighted by a tallow candle, and this was carried in the hand of a man, who met them face to face as he entered the room from one beyond it.

He regarded them in astonishment, his eyes giving forth a glitter of the hate which he did not care to conceal.

How do you do, father? said Ruth, pleasantly. She had little love for her father, but it was neither politic nor necessary to show him this. She had always been ready and willing to be friendly if he would.

How d'do? he returned gruffly. Wasn't looking for you. Out of a job? Sick?

No; oh, no. I'm quite well, thank you; plenty of work, too.

That's all good. Needn't thank me. Little cause indeed had she to thank him. Since her earliest girlhood she had supported herself and given her mother all the comforts she had known in that time.

He passed on, boots in hand, to his bedroom, and his wife and daughter went upstairs to the room that had once been Ruth's.

Bare and comfortless it was, but Ruth's eyes filled with tears as she entered it. The broken and bitter-sweet dreams of her early girlhood, briefly indulged in, had been dreamed there, and the sight of the old-fashioned things she had once used brought back the old-time joys and pains, too, distinctly.

I wish you could stay and chat with me, Mother, but I suppose it is the same old story.

Yes; I mustn't seem to be talking with you. He'll hate to leave us here together to-morrow, but he's got it all so planned that he can't help it.

If I had known, I would have done some planning, and not arrived until to-morrow morning.

Yes, but I did not know in time to write to you. Hurriedly the harassed wife and mother passed out of her daughter's dear presence and ran softly down the stairs to make ostentatious sounds of housewifely clatter in the kitchen, so he would not lie on his bed and grind his teeth working himself into a jealous rage because he suspected that she and Ruth were saying things about him which he well knew he deserved.

Hearing that his patient wife had so quickly descended to her usual work of preparation for early retiring, he dozed off to sleep in spite of himself, and she soon heard him snoring loudly and deeply. She went softly and looked at him as he lay with the moonlight streaming in his face, and then she stole swiftly up the stairs for another talk with Ruth. Her tender conscience troubled her. She had been loyal and forbearing with James Pierce ever since their marriage, and now that she was so near to taking a step that forever carried her away from him and left him alone in the almost comfortless home, which he had made so cheerless for her, caring only to lay by the hard-earned dollars that should have bought pleasant and beautiful things for their mutual enjoyment—now that she was to step out from under his hard rule, her conscience would not let her do so in peace.

The half-dozen men who were hired to work during haying-time were all sleeping, as was her husband. Men who worked under the orders of James Pierce were always ready to retire with the fading of daylight, or shortly after, and to-morrow was to be an exceptionally hard one, for haying was to begin at the farther farm, and they must be on the march to reach the scene of their labors long before sunrise.

Hence only she was still stirring. Ruth, who was busy visiting with Dandy, the old shepherd dog, whom she had stealthily smuggled up to her room, and who, his first ecstacy of recognition over, was crowding very close to her and patiently submitting to all sorts of caresses, which from a mere acquaintance would have been snarlingly resented.

EIGHT DAY CLOCKS

The French have a fashion of expressing an indefinite but short period of time by the phrase "about eight days." Under similar conditions we would say "about a week." The French method seems unnatural, ours natural, for a week is a distinctly recognized period. We believe there is only one way in which we use the eight day period, and that is in making clocks.

Did it ever occur to you why we have what is called an eight day clock and not one made to run exactly seven days? There is a good reason for it. A clock that is made to run eight days is pretty sure to be wound on a certain day of the week, for it would be almost impossible for any one to remember to wind it on every eighth day. Therefore the interval between windings is seven days, precisely as the maker desired and expected.

The reason is that a clock runs better when it is not allowed to run down, or even nearly so. The same plan is followed in making a watch; it will run for thirty hours, but as nearly every man winds his watch at the same hour every day or night, the spring is never fully exhausted. Regularity in winding is one of the best means of keeping a timepiece in order.

ENGLISH WITH A FRENCH POLISH

There are disadvantages attached to wealth when one was not born it it or is slow in getting used to it. One that Mr. Quidsby found, says London Answers, was that the chief always sent up the menu written in his own language, French, to which the master of the household was a stranger.

"I should like to know what I'm eating for once, M. Alphonse," said Mr. Quidsby to his chief on one occasion. "Let us have the menu in English to-day."

"Oui, monsieur," was the reply. "It ees ver' difficile, but I veel do it so if you veel gif me ze dictionnaire."

A small but select party came to dinner that evening and were met with the following bill of fare.

Soup at the tail of the calf.
Salmon in curl papers.
Chest of mutton to the little peas.
Potatoes jumped.
Ducks savage at sharp sauce.
Charlotte at the apples.
Turkey at the devil.
Fruits variegated.

Quidsby and Mrs. Quidsby agreed afterward that they had never presided over a more hilarious dinner party.

INSANITY IN THAW CASE

NEW YORK, October 4th.—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, will probably never be brought to trial. His case in No. 14 in a list of twenty-eight homicide cases to be disposed of by the District Attorney and there are strong indications that a commission in lunacy will be applied by one side or the other sometime before No. 14 is reached.

Clifford W. Hartridge, attorney for Thaw, said to-day that there would be no application for a lunacy commission. He would not say, however, that he would not at sometime make such an application. In this connection it is known that the associate counsel retained by Hartridge are in favor of applying for a lunacy commission.

It is considered practically certain that a commission will declare Thaw insane. Several prominent alienists have already so found.

WOODALL ESTATE DIVIDED

Messrs. Adlay Clements, Eugene M. Bonwill, W. Hepbron, of Kent county, Thomas C. Cruikshank and Geo. S. Woolley of Cecil county, the commission appointed by Chief Judge Pearce to appraise and partition the real estate of the late Andrew Woodall completed their arduous task last week and filed their voluminous report. The total value of the real estate is placed at $379,823.22, of which the six heirs would receive $63,303.87, and each of the four grandchildren would receive $15,825. The personalty is valued at $272,224.49, making the whole estate worth $651,067.71.
